THE days of the tightly pulled facelift could be numbered if the latest trend in Hollywood is anything to go by.

Los Angeles dermatologist and celebrity skin doctor Dr Ava Shamban, who presented papers at the recent Australasian Academy of Anti-Ageing Medicine conference in early September, says there is a definite shift away from invasive cosmetic surgery towards a more natural look, with people wanting to look younger rather than different.

"The hottest trend to watch for is careful facial recontouring using a combination of laser, radiofrequency devices, fillers and muscle relaxants," she says.
