

BEAUTY ED'S FAVE

Style mogul Giorgio Armani knows his stuff when it comes to foundation. While his Luminous Silk foundations have held their own for a while now, the fair-skinned among us have something new to celebrate with the launch of shade 3.5. It's warm without being yellow and porcelain without being pink. Perfect!

◀ CLAIRE DANES

Fashionistas preach that whatever the trend, you should dress for your shape – and the same goes for beauty. Before embracing a new look, consider your skin tone. Claire Danes scores top points for working with what she's got. Claire's make-up artist Coleen Campbell-Olwell makes the most of her gorgeous skin with a luminiser (1). 'I don't want to change who they are. I just want add to who they are and glamorise them a little bit,' Coleen says. And forget the rule that blondes can't wear all reds – note how this fair-skinned beauty skilfully tailors the look to suit her complexion. She negotiates the red lip terrain by opting for a red with pink undertones (2), and goes for a stain, the halfway point between a gloss and a lipstick.

◀ 5 MINS WITH DR ZACHARIA

Gone boggle-eyed trying to buy a new beauty potion? We spoke to renowned plastic surgeon Dr Michael Zacharia, president of the AustralAsian Academy of Anti-Ageing Medicine, who separates the fact from fiction in the anti-ageing market...

What are the latest ingredients we should be looking out for in a face cream?

Look for Retinol – the purest and most active form of vitamin A – for resurfacing and rejuvenating the skin, and antioxidants such as coenzyme Q10 and green tea, to protect against free radical damage. Vitamin C plumps up the skin and reduces pigmentation, and alpha hydroxy acids [AHAs] are great for acne, dryness and sun damage.

How much can a cream actually do for the skin?

A good face cream can dramatically improve the condition of the skin. A high-quality product can help smooth fine lines and surface wrinkles, unblock and cleanse pores, rejuvenate the skin and promote the production of collagen.

Is there such a thing as a miracle potion?

Anti-ageing is a lifestyle and is not found in a quick-solution skincare product.

Ten years from now, what results can we expect in the way of anti-ageing?

We'll see a more personalised approach through gene testing. This may be able to reverse our skin's biological clock by 10 or more years.
